Internship:

Verité interns work on a variety of research projects addressing forced labor, human trafficking, and human rights abuses worldwide. Interns will perform desk research, various administrative tasks, draft reports, and proofread texts. Research interns will read and analyze reports published by the U.S. Department of State, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the International Labour Organization (ILO) and become familiar with the work of these entities as well as the work of many different stakeholders. Interns will support our work with brands and our large-scale federally-funded research projects by conducting desk research on and analyzing supply chains, sectors, and commodities. Interns may assist on a number of Verité projects and are not limited to only the projects detailed below.

Start date: Negotiable; beginning of Fall semester

End date: Negotiable; end of Fall semester

Interns are expected to work 8-10 hours per week during the semester for at least 10-12 weeks. Exact start and end dates and hours are negotiable as long as those criterion are met. All internships are on-site; we do not accept interns working remotely. Our office hours are 9am – 5pm (EST).

Verité offers interns a modest stipend in the amount of $250 for the duration of the Fall session to offset any cost of living expenses. If your school also provides either funding or academic credits for intern work, Verité is happy to assist with the required paperwork. We also provide opportunities to interact with senior staff, mentoring, networking assistance, and references upon successful completion of the internship.

Projects

- Partnership for Slavery-Free Supply Chains: Millions of victims of forced labor are connected to multinational corporations, whose labor supply chains are hidden behind multiple layers of third-party intermediaries known as "labor brokers," who recruit, hire and manage migrant workers on behalf of supplier factories and farms. A key root cause of the modern day slavery of migrant workers is lack of visibility and understanding by multinational companies and their suppliers of the recruitment practices experienced by these migrants. Companies also lack effective screening and oversight mechanisms to monitor the activities of these labor brokers, in both the countries of origin and destination of migrant workers. Multinational companies are struggling to perform effective monitoring and verification of good labor practice in an environment of long and complex supply chains that involve dozens if not hundreds or thousands of suppliers and brokers. New approaches are needed.

Verité is currently working on a philanthropically-funded pilot project to create a labor broker risk screening tool that will enable companies to unravel complex labor supply chains and identify risks of human trafficking and forced labor within them. The initial stage of the pilot is focusing on electronics production in Southeast Asia. Verité is piloting original research on labor brokers and their practices in Bangladesh, Cambodia, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Myanmar, Nepal, Pakistan, the Philippines, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Taiwan, Thailand, and Vietnam. This data will be integrated with corporate supply chain data, analyzed, and visualized on a data analytics platform to give an unprecedented look at the source of forced labor risk in this sector and region. Intern tasks include:

- Performing targeted desk research in English and Chinese, to develop profiles for a set of labor brokers and their practices in each country of focus, using a wide variety of sources including academic, corporate, business, NGO, media, and government reports
 - Organize findings using reporting templates and assist lead researchers in inputting the gathered information into a database
 - For individuals with fluency in certain languages, especially Chinese, they might provide translation assistance for documents, correspondence, and research tools. Those with language skills in Korean or Arabic, closely followed by Thai and Mandarin, are encouraged to apply.
- Responsible Sourcing Tool: In 2016, Verité launched the Responsible Sourcing Tool \(RST\), providing a resource to federal contractors to meet the anti-trafficking compliance measures in the Federal Acquisition Regulation. In addition to federal contractors, the interactive website helps companies, advocates, and consumers detect, prevent, and combat trafficking in global supply chains and meet the growing number of legal, regulatory, and market demands for attention to severe exploitation in global supply chains. The website currently contains extensive research on 11 key sectors and 43 commodities at risk for trafficking or trafficking-related activities, ten comprehensive risk management tools, case studies, and links to guidance from other expert organizations. Intern tasks include:

- Desk research and media scans on specific commodities and sectors
 - Report drafting and updating
 - Data-related work (trade and export data, organizing data in certain platforms, updating data and quality assurance)
- China Worker Well-being Project: This program is designed to change how workers are taught the key compliance subjects (focusing on labor rights and health and safety) in China’s vocational schools, with a direct link to on-going training and empowerment mechanisms in their post-school workplace life. Interns would work in cooperation with the Grant Program Manager based in China, the China office Director, and other Verité staff. Intern tasks include:
- Perform targeted desk research and data/information/material collection in English and Chinese
 - Conduct preliminary/basic analysis of survey and evaluation results
 - Provide translation assistance for documents, correspondence and tools as (between English and Chinese)
 - Assist Program Manager in organizing and inputting the gathered information into a database
 - Assist in drafting and formatting of communication leaflets/reports/training materials/surveys
 - Other tasks as required by Program Manager and China Director
 - Occasional calls or check-ins outside of office hours may be required, due to the time difference with our China office
- Research & Data: The Research and Data intern will be responsible for maintaining the statistical content in the Africa microsite on our website. The work will involve pulling in new numbers from publicly available published datasets and manipulating them to generate updated charts. The project will also involve desk research to update written content on the site to match the new charts, and to update narrative information about key commodities and countries. This intern will also assist and support our Raw Materials programming more generally. Skills, abilities, and competencies for this internship include:
- Attention to detail
 - Excellent English-language writing and editing skills
 - Basic interest in statistics and data analysis
 - A designer’s eye and a writer’s mastery of grammar and copyediting
 - Familiarity with Microsoft Office Suite
 - Interest in Sub-Saharan Africa preferred, and proficiency with Infogram and/or WordPress or other content management systems a plus
- Monitoring & Evaluation: Verité assesses the progress and outcomes of grant-funded projects and is working to build organization-wide systems for measuring the broader impact of our work across departments. This internship will support Verité’s M&E efforts at both a project and organizational level—an exciting opportunity for anyone interested in the complexities of impact measurement in the human rights sector. This may include the following:
- Participate in Verité’s internal Performance and Impact Team and support the development of a framework for measuring organizational impact.
 - Research relevant performance indicators and M&E approaches in the labor rights, policy advocacy, and capacity building sectors for potential inclusion in Verité’s impact framework.
 - Support M&E activities for grant-funded projects. May include database management, data analysis, and survey development.
 - Conduct a data audit: work across departments to document existing performance and impact data, data collection/storage practices, data needs, and data dreams—with an emphasis on monitoring & evaluation.
 - Review historical documents and records and extract data, stories, and anecdotal evidence that can be used to communicate organizational impact.

- Scaling Up Responsible Recruitment: Pilot Approaches and Technology Tools for High-Risk Sectors in Southeast Asia: Modern day slavery, including forced labor and human trafficking, affects more than 20 million people. As globalization and migration have increased, an exploitative system of labor recruitment has emerged, based on charging excessive and illegal recruitment fees to migrant workers, often resulting in circumstances of forced labor, bonded labor and trafficking for labor exploitation. Despite initiatives to promote responsible recruitment, there has been limited progress in better protecting foreign workers from human trafficking. There remains a great need to understand the economic barriers to responsible recruitment; to build the capacity of all stakeholders to promote and adopt responsible recruitment practices and provide them practical tools and approaches with which to do so; and to enhance workers' ability to advocate for better conditions & legal protections. Verité is currently engaged in a research project examining the implementation of responsible recruitment practices in the electronics manufacturing sector in Southeast Asia. Intern tasks will include:
 - In-depth desk research and gathering of up-to-date demographic profiles of workers in the Malaysian electronic sector with a focus on profiles of migrant workers (to be drawn from on-line, publicly available sources)
 - In-depth desk research on and drafting of a description of the current electronics sector in Malaysia, including but not limited to, workforce, products manufactured, average wages, contribution to Malaysia's economy (to be drawn from on-line, publicly available sources)
 - Conduct a structured review of codes of conduct and sustainability reports from a selection of electronics companies on the topic of recruitment fees
